

Central Iowa ARMA Chapter Meeting December 3, 2009

LightEdge Solutions Tour – Altoona IA

What would your company do if your building burned to the ground? How would you handle communications? Where would you put your people? How can you field incoming customer calls? These are all typical business continuity questions that every company must address at some point. On December 3rd, you will get to tour a facility that handles exactly these types of issues.

LightEdge Solutions is a local technology company that specializes in voice and data communications as well as server co-location and hot site availability. Our group will get a first hand tour of their new Altoona facility which serves as their hot site. This facility has desk seating for 100-150 people with telephone access, desktop PCs that can be networked to backed-up servers and other communication services that can save a company's integrity, customer base and financial well-being during a disaster.
